you get 16 collectible stickers.

Next time your mom brings home good tasting, nutritious Chiquita® bananas, be sure she brings home free Winter Olympic stickers for you. Each bunch of bananas with the blue Chiquita banana sticker also has an Olympic sticker. 16 stickers in all, featuring the Official Winter Olympic symbols and mascot. And there's a free collector's card, too. It's specially designed to hold and display the full set of Olympic event stickers. Have mom pick one up at the Chiquita banana Winter Olympic display at your grocery store. And save this ad to help you keep track of the stickers as you collect and trade them.

THE SAGA OF JOHNNY BLAZE: Once, not so long ago, he was the pawn of Satan. He has since been freed. But, for reasons he cannot yet comprehend, he still possesses Satan-spawned strength and the searing touch of hellfire. Whether these supernatural powers are a blessing or a curse, he does not know. Yet.

GHOST WRITERS!

c/o MARVEL COMICS GROUP

DENNIS O'NEIL
EDITOR
MARK GRUENWALD
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Dear Marvel,

After just three issues together, the Fleisher/Perlin GHOST RIDER is already rivalling the very best of your books.

Don's art has been continually excellent. I'll simply say that issue #38's splash page was great, page ten was terrific, and page thirty was practically frightening.

As for Mike... well, some of his lines for the Ghost Rider really blow me away. I'm sure if I told this to a guy on the street, he'd say, "You're crazy!" (I am, but that's beside the point.) Never before has the Ghost Rider been such a separate entity — rather than a mere act for Johnny Blaze. The demon has his own nearly unfathomable patterns of thought, and Mike is realizing the potential of this. I hope that the supporting characters in his future G.R. tales will be just as interesting as those already shown.

Ken Hart

Staten Island, NY 10300

Dear Marvel,

"The Cult of Doom" in GHOST RIDER #38 was another enjoyable effort, although I do have a couple of reservations.

The almost casual way in which the Death-cultists regard death was given insufficient build-up. This is a very powerful subject, yet the deaths of the cultists were treated as if they were just a matter of course. Now, I realize that they were just a matter of course as far as the cultists were concerned, but the true perversity of this outlook and the factors contributing to its acceptance should have been more fully dealt with.

I'm also fearful that the treatment of the death-cultists will be superficial, in the sense that their whole philosophy is given as being so obviously wrong and that the leader is truly evil. In reality, the wrong is so often very subtle and hard to discern... unless it is viewed against precisely the correct background and the leader is well-intentioned or at least seemingly reasonable. I know that these nuances are hard to portray, but when you decide to deal with so sensitive a subject, I feel that you also automatically must try to do an outstanding job.

Now, on the general matter of the attitudes that the Ghost Rider has been displaying of late: I realize that it is difficult to get a roving character such as the Ghost Rider involved in interesting situations each issue — but still, his reasons for involvement must be consistent in order to retain the book's integrity. It seems to me that the Ghost Rider has recently been doing good intentionally, rather than incidentally, as he has in the past. The latter circumstances are much more chilling, as well as being consistent with G.R.'s origins (and with his continued talk about being an agent of Hell). It is also quite possible to do this in a dramatic sense, as the Ghost Rider is a most unusual central character... especially in light of the fact that the reader need not empathize with him. (It is, to say the least, hard to identify with a flaming head!)

Recently, it seems, the Ghost Rider is always talking of vengeance. Correct me if I'm wrong, but hasn't vengeance traditionally been the province of the deity? I never pictured the Satan figure being concerned with vengeance (which, after all, assumes a predisposition for "justice" or "right" by the one seeking vengeance), but rather with "grabbing" whoever he can get, virtually for the simple terror he could then inflict.

(I realize that Johnny's personality may be altering or moderating the Ghost Rider's — but, if so, this has not been made sufficiently clear.)

GHOST RIDER is a unique and interesting book. The resolution of these inconsistencies would make it all the better.

T.M. Maple
Toronto, Ontario

Thanks for the inciteful commentary, T.M. We can learn as much from a constructively critical letter like yours, as we can from a mountain of fave raves — if not more!

You're right, of course, about the various devil-types having more to do with soul-snatching than vengeance-seeking. However, the Ghost Rider is not purely a demon. Nor is he under the control of any devil. (For more on this subject, see the following missive.)

Anyway, we hope to thoroughly explain the nature of the Ghost Rider over the upcoming months. In the meantime, Mr. M, don't hesitate to let us know how we're doing. After all, as someone once said, you're the only reason we're here!

'Nuff said?

Dear Ghost-Writers,

What's this? Johnny Blaze is influencing the Ghost Rider? But, of course! I see it all so clearly now.

First, let's admit that Blaze has always exercised some form of control over the Ghost Rider from the very start. The wise-cracking Ghost Rider of the old CHAMPIONS comic — a persona I detested — was obviously the result of Blaze's unwillingness to let the demon take over. During this period, he changed form, but psychologically he remained Johnny Blaze.

Now, however, Johnny is obviously allowing G.R. to take over, although he seems to be retaining a little bit of checking power. Rather than allowing Ghosty to unleash his powers against all humanity, the subdued Blaze persona tempers the demon's rage on a subconscious level — channeling it into a hell-spawned drive for vengeance.

After all, what hellish purpose could Ghost Rider have in punishing evil-doers? Would a Satan-spawn really give a hang about justice? I doubt it. Besides, by that token, he would still be pitted against all humanity. None of us is pure at heart. As a case in point: the construction types in issue #36 were neither "evil" nor "scum"... they were merely hard cases. And, the Ghost Rider did not kill them.

Personally, I hope the strip continues in this direction, with vengeance as the theme. I would hate to see the Ghost Rider become just a creature of rampant destruction in a manner of a supernatural Hulk. This would be pointless, having neither aim nor impact.

I would like to put in a bid for more other-earthly menaces. The Ghost Rider deserves better than Dirk Varden and the inevitable sleepless trucker.

Duane Tremaine
(No address given)

If it's bizarre menaces you're looking for, Duane, you need look no further than..

NEXT ISSUE. What happens when Johnny Blaze is separated from the Ghost Rider?! You'll find out in just thirty days in a very different story we call "Night of the Crimson Mage!" It's a tale fraught with mysticism and mayhem, and it's all yours in GHOST RIDER #43! Be there... aloha!

BULLPEN BULLETINS

STAN'S SOAPBOX

Okay, Omniscient Ones, here's the news you've been waiting for! The second sensational, senses-staggering Captain America TV spectacular is in the final stages of production, and you can catch it early in January! We don't know the exact date, but it'll be shown on CBS-TV, two hours prime time, so watch the tv listings, hear? I'm cluing you way in advance 'cause no excuses will be accepted if you miss it! Anyone who blows it will just have to answer to the Red Skull! I've already seen the script, and I can tell you it's gotta be one of the most exciting, adult, suspense-packed super-spectaculars you've ever marvelled at! And wait'll you see the scene where Cap, on his cycle, goes over a mile-high cliff towards certain death, only to suddenly — aw, why give it away? Suffice it to say, it's the greatest stuntman shot of the year! That's Captain America — all new — all live — prime time — on CBS-TV — early in January! We'll be lookin' for you!

Incidentally, my newest opus, "The Best of the Worst" is going such great guns at bookstores [redacted] the Best"! Imagine what comes next! "The Biggest of the Small"! "The Hottest of the Cold"! "The Goodest of the Bad"! And you thought I couldn't be serious!

Finally — I've received lots of letters lately asking for my views on religion. While I don't feel I oughtta use this funky little forum to air my own opinions about such an extremely personal matter, there is one general, non-denominational viewpoint I'd like to mention. It's pretty hard for me to believe that the ever unfolding miracle of the universe — the awesome cycle of birth, and life, and death — the myriad mysteries of nature — and the wonders contained in every atom, every molecule, every living cell in every living creature, just happened to occur by chance! I believe that there is some entity, far wiser and far mightier than we. I feel there must be some divine purpose, some unfathomable plan behind the mystic fabric of mortal existence. And I believe that's about as stuffy and pontifical as I ever wanna sound! So, till we meet again, remember those immortal words of Irving Forbush: "Shaddup awreddy!"

Excelsior!
